My humour resembles that of Cromwell.

(Throughout his life, Satie never knew the meaning of compromise, courageously overcoming the miseries of man's lot and drawing his strength from his own inward resources.)

I also owe much to Christopher Columbus, because the American spirit has occasionally tapped me on the shoulder and I have been delighted to feel its ironically glacial bite.

(When the air-raids on Paris began, we are told that he would seek shelter with his neighbors, announcing his arrival with the words: "I'm coming to die with you", uttered in a low, sepulchral voice...)

Everyone will tell you I am not a musician. That is true.

(Over music as simple in its melodic line, and as French, as that of Massenet he has inscribed the most astounding titles and the most terrifying directions to the performer ... In one instance he has asked the pianist to play "Like a nightingale with a toothache" ... He has been heard to remark, "Il faut etre rigolo!")

(And while the pedants may refuse to take him seriously and the great public does not even know his name, future historians must reserve a few pages for this esoteric figure ... "Fumiste - peut-etre - mais il a fait quelque chose.")

It is clear that the Deflated, the Insignificant and the Puffed-Up Ones will not appreciate these works. Let them swallow their beards! Let them dance on their own stomachs!

(I was glad to have this opportunity of paying homage, even so far afield as in America, to the memory of my old friend and mastes, whose fierce independence and proud hatred of compromise I so often recall.)

(Satie apporte une simplicité neuve, enrichie de tous les raffinements qui précédent.)

Do you know how to clean sounds? It is rather a dirty process...
